6. RRRA Report
Jaden Slawter; We are currently focused on the ongoing election for RRRA, but continue to work with the student experience office and CUSA for FROSH.

7. GSA Report
Namrata Tilokani: Recently the GSA has chosen a new executive director and developed a new team and continue their transition. Been in constant contact with graduate and postdoctoral affairs in terms of advocating for graduate students. Some of the issues they have been advocating for include CO-OP fees and their reduction, academic breaks for international students, funding for grants, a mandatory anti-racism course for all students. As well, they are working on an anti racism strategy for Carleton. Adjusting many incoming expectations for graduate students for the fall as many of them have to juggle being parents, some are mature students, some are international students. In addition, they are advocating for a reduction in funding for Master students that are international students because they are still paying 3 times the tuition fees during COVID which makes it inaccessible. They are also adding more mental health support for graduate students and some of the events they’ve recently done have had healing spaces to respond to anti black racism in the community. This included having a psychotherapist and a social worker come in and have a space for black students specifically along with having open spaces. These events are going well as they are well attended and will continue to be held for the next month. They have also made donations to the black legal actions centre because they believe that a statement of solidarity is just a starting point and wanted to back it with monetary donations. A majority of their team are also community organizers and have been supporting protests on the front lines as well. As president, Namratha is working on passing their budget and trying to reconcile their budget with COVID-19. They have also been working on their communication strategy as an organization to see where their gaps are and where they can do better. Along with this, they want to rebrand the whole organization for next year for the 30th anniversary. They have also been able to meet with other council members along with CUSA executives to discuss their relationship. They are also looking for a space to gather community organizers to create a community organizing hub for students and community organizers to get funding for things that they would like to do. As well, they are working to establish and build their support program. Lastly, the president and the VP academics are working in the senate to bring forward student concerns.
8. CASG Report
Matthew Gagne; We are working on some ongoing projects such as revamping and rebranding their brand on social media. We are still accepting applications for the international student relief bursary until June 30th at midnight. In light of ongoing events our community acknowledges that racism is not just a problem in the USA but here in Canada, as a result their executive put together an action plan to reform our internal operation to create a more inclusive environment within CASG. This plan includes the introduction of an equity committee, including equity officers that sit on their council and sensitivity training mandated once a year in our bylaws for our council. As student leaders we need to be sensitive to these issues. All of these changes will be brought to our new council in the fall. Finally, going into July our VPLS and I started our operation budget for the 2020-2021 academic year, tackling all the challenges that reality brings.

9. Senate Report

13. Items for Information
Tinu Akinwande will be striking the student issue action committee, for further information contact her directly. It will be striked next council meeting.

14. Question Period

Cameron; How much are we looking into the financial viability of places such as Haven’s, Ollie’s and Rooster’s currently and whether there is any thought in freezing Rooster’s and Ollie’s until the winter semester since a lot of students will not be able to go?

Jacob; This has been looked over and we have had requests for Ollie’s patio as well as offering delivery services. As for Haven’s since people are at home there has been no need to buy textbooks and it was closed but now we are looking to introduce soft serve to create additional revenue. Rooster’s is similar in the sense that since there will be no students at campus in the fall semester it would be 99 to 1 that it would be open as it usually is because it is not financially viable. We’re also waiting to see what the university is doing because if they turned it into a hybrid fall semester then having Rooster’s open in the morning for breakfast would be an option.

But there are lots of things to consider and this is why it has taken a while to implement these things and decide whether things are feasible or not.

Cameron; Will there be any consideration in expanding the list of courses for programs such as engineering to take more of the EDI focused courses?

Tinu; I have been hearing this from a lot of people in restrictive programs such as PAPM, engineering, science because they do not have as many electives. I would like to work on expanding it including prerequisites for some courses being in the directory. Michael Charles assistant vice president of equity inclusionary services and is looking to implement more change within the curriculum and I will be more than happy to bring it up in the advisory board meeting that will be happening late this month or early next month. If there are any further questions, reach out on any of our platforms and I will advocate for these things to be done as it is important to be educated on.

Liam; I was wondering what the VP finance and the President thought about the petition going around regarding lowering the tuition prices for the upcoming fall semester? And will it be brought up with the university?

Kathleen; A lot of students have been asking about this especially international students that are being hit particularly hard and mentioned this briefly in my report. But I met with Susan Blanchard who is Vice president of student’s enrollment as well as the university registrar and had a productive conversation regarding this topic and I made 2 requests. The first being to freeze tuition fee increases for international students considering domestic tuition increase fees are frozen but international student fees are going up 8% this year. The university is hesitant on this issue and the advocacy will need to continue as the university wants to approach it with need base bursaries. I will follow up with them to see exactly how they want to implement this system for all students but especially international students and targets students that are especially struggling. Now in terms of lowering tuition costs for domestic students I agree that the quality of service that students are getting is not the same as if in person and the university should adjust their costs accordingly. So one thing I requested the university look into was instead of framing it as a tuition decrease, create a bursary or credit given to all students to their student credit account. This would cause a long term incentive for registration and incentives students to come back in the winter. The university is seriously considering this option and Susan will get back to me soon, and it is financially viable for the university to make this decision. But they remain hesitant due to costs being high and having already passed the budget.
Emily; I have a question for the VPI in regarding the social media going on with the CUSA council as I have had a couple of members from student organizations approach me about it. So what is the content creation plan for the CUSA council page and how do we ensure that it is consistent throughout times where online interaction is super essential?

Farook; The social media will contain our agenda, our minutes, and publish when our council meeting is, as well as including our link in the bio just so it is more accessible for any student that would like to join our council meeting. At the same time we will be making posts from our councillors in each department so if students do stumble across it or any questions, they will know who to speak to. Therefore students will be able to contact the councillors because their information will be accessible. On the other hand we want our councillors to have an opinion on what is posted.

Emily; Is it you [Farook] that runs the page for the time being?

Farook; It is myself and the communication office for now.
