Past Month:

- Wrote, filmed and edited videos for the Pop the Stigma Video Series
  - These include subjects such as the introduction, world mental health day, seasonal depression, fatigue, working from home, men's mental illness and much more
- Executed other pop stigma events such as a chat with NFL player Brennan Scarlett in collaboration with the black student Alliance, a self-care night, hormones and mental health which was in collaboration with the Womxn's Center, an event with the Muslim Students Association centering around Faith, spirituality and mental wellness and also a mental immense mental Wellness Q&A with a transformative life coach. For next week we have our #normalize graphics and other promotion of other resources
- Attended the student government lunch which included University officials here we discussed two major topics such as:
  - The e-proctoring system that brought forth a lot of concern from students
  - Workload Management & overload from instructors and professors in their courses
  - Also discussing the university’s plan on monitoring students who have entered the country again for schooling purposes, particularly international students
- I also attended the EDI townhall which was organized by Equity inclusive community services
  - Here we talked about the five-stage action plan in order to implement palpable EDI resources. A big part of this conversation revolved around pedagogy and the diversity of course material and transparency/accessibility of course material towards stricter programs such as engineering
- Completed the First Year Connections mentorship program
- Created graphics and solidarity statement for the ongoing movements occurring in Africa, particularly with the #EndSars Movement in Nigeria. Particularly disappointment in the University’s lack of response, especially when there is a large and vibrant Nigerian community here at Carleton, with a lot of them being international Students.
Ongoing Projects:
- First Year mentorship
- COVID- Support and resources
- Continuing to work on campaigns
  - The first semester has been going smoothly in terms of responses from external parties. Next Month is financial literacy month, and Morgan will be taking over that. In the meantime, I will be directing my focus into next semester campaigns and study snacks initiatives.
- Flu Shots at designated locations for Carleton Students
  - There is an underwhelming response of franchise's who would want to block out a timeslot for university students. We are still reviewing other methods to promote this initiative

Month Ahead:
- Financial Literacy Month (helping Morgan in the background where need be)
- Continuing to Follow up with Academic Accommodations and Pop-up Clinics
- Switching gears to next semester and December’s exam season.

6. RRRA Report
Jaden: Our team was able to release the RRRA report which is the teams association executive report covering the months from August to September. We worked really hard to get this out to students to ensure that there was more transparency to what the executives have been working on behind the scenes. You can find the report of the RRRA website, and our next report is scheduled to come out in November. All of our council committees have been formed and have met. I am happy to see the engagement in committees this year, a lot of councilors are speaking up and using their voices. One highlight for one of my committees is the COVID-19 committee who is planning on launching a COVID-19 campaign this November when residence students return from reading week. This campaign would be a way for students to communicate with the rest of the community on why it is important to follow all the COVID regulations put in place. The campaign is called “Mask up or Pack up” and it is a campaign by students for students. We will be touching on subjects such as how to stay sexually active during COVID-19, how to stay socially active, as well as discuss loneliness and the overall COVID-19 regulations in place for residence. Other organizations will be contributing to this campaign such as Housing and Residence, CUSA, SBSS, and the SEO. I also recall in the last CUSA council that a member asked about flu shots for residence, so residents are now being offered flu vaccinations. We are happy that this is something that we are still able to provide this year especially with the current circumstances but there was a demand from students and we did what was necessary. Most recently we just had our October council, the association's operating budget was passed and is now available for viewing on the RRRA website. Lastly, a few upcoming events for the association including a Halloween costume contest, a pumpkin pinning contest for the residence community, as well as a Disney+ watch party to view Halloween Town. If you have any questions or concerns, you can reach me at President@RRRA.ca.

7. GSA Report
None.

8. CASG Report
Matt: This past Tuesday we had our first council meeting, it went really well. We were able to pass our budgets, as well as get ourselves a new journalism representative. Thanks to Jaden and Nathaniel for coming and giving your reports, our council really appreciated that. We also had our meeting with the administration about e-protoring, we talked about the workload. Kathleen and Tinu already covered that pretty well so I won’t waste any more time on that. In regards to permanent grade reform I’m still doing consultations with academic societies, the next faculty I will be discussing this issue with is the student centre as well as one of the CUSA councillors. We will be visiting all the major engineering societies in the next couple weeks to compile their opinions. In terms of the senates, as Kathleen previously stated we are bringing forward three different motions for short term grade reform due to COVID-19. The first being that all failed courses will be changed to unsatisfactory, the second being that there will be a delay in all punitive academic performance evaluations until the next academic year, the third is in regards to the 0.5 satisfactory credit for this semester. We are confident that now that we have the support of the senate committee on academic policy that all three will be able to pass. Finally, our academic initiative fund opened up just yesterday and we have $8,000 up for grabs in terms of funding. It is open to engineering students, science students, councilors please go onto our instagram and share the graphic, we want to make sure that as many students as possible know.
9. Senate Report
None.

10. Board of Governors Report
Nathaniel: The board of governors had a very eventful September meeting. The three main points that we received were the oversights of the EIC strategic planning that is unfolding. As many of you know the forum that has been held by Michael Charles for the past few weeks, we have gotten a lot of feedback from that. Some points were raised from different governors, including myself in regards to the number of mental health support staff for racialized students coming forth. This remains an ongoing discussion and I encourage you all to reach out to the IC and the chairman of the board to include your testimonials or ideas to advance this. Secondly was the environmental report that was tabled by the building committee, we have a comprehensive environmental report that includes getting to carbon neutrality by 2050 which is a huge development. We also have a long way to go in terms of divestment, as you know there is the strong divestment movement on campus. There are a few motions going forward towards the committee for the next few months, so by December we should be able to see some work including the work I’m doing through the University advancement committee. We are also facing the issue with the Turkish graduate student that was detained in Turkey. There are public and private elements that the university is doing to that effect, I received a public and private briefing on the matter. Publicly the university as you know through the departments of anthropology and sociology has been strong in their condonation of Turkey which is important to discuss and is included in the minutes as well. As well, we have the senate report that was given to us, I personally raised the issue of PAPM curriculum reform which you see a lot of students signing up for particularly in the black community. Lastly, we do have the matter of tuition. I presented and tabled the matter of tuition decreases particularly Jasmine Doubies mission reaching almost 7,000 students calling for lower tuition. Of course this is a difficult sell and I was unable to introduce the motion because it was procedurally impossible to do so in September. But speaking to my board colleagues, moving forward into the December meeting there is going to be a larger discussion about athletic fees which we hope to decrease by 50%, along with other fees and tuition mechanisms. Particularly, this is in regard to the audited budget that we saw, we have a large refund which is very unique in Canadian universities circumstances, where Carleton is on sound physical footing and are able to subsidize a marginal tuition decrease with some of our auxiliary budget.

11. Constituency Report
None.

12. Committee Reports
Clubs and Society (Read by Farook) : We have completed all funding allocations, but there are a few more for clubs that missed the time slots. In total we have about $60,000 which is a good amount considering how many clubs have applied. I am very pleased with the amount of clubs that applied and the amount of clubs that returned to dedicate their time and give back to the community.
13. Items for Information
None.

14. Question period
Liam: What exactly is CUSA standing in regards to the e-proctor?
Kathleen: We don’t really have a stance due to professors being entitled to academic freedom, although we are advocating for more transparency with the university. As mentioned in my report all professors using e-proctoring will have to send out an email to their students. We are advocating for more open exams but if a professor wants to have a proctoring service then they are entitled to it. Our protoral service is campus based and therefore not being shared with external sources.
Liam: Why do some courses require it and others don’t?
Kathleen: It is really based on the professor. Only 6% of students will have exams that will be e-prototuted and has been used for years but is being widely known. The university is also trying to find an alternative for students that are uncomfortable with the e-proctor system.
Jacob: In addition to what Kathleen was saying, we are here for students in regards for their concerns. We read their concerns on forums such as reddit and take these concerns seriously.

Nathaniel: To the president, in regards to the professor at the University of Ottawa using the N-word and their academic freedom and all the rest. I have been discussing with my counterparts on the board of governors there to come up with a bilateral strategy for a collective agreement. I was wondering if you have a stance on moving forward if CUSA can be more involved with a student perspective and advocacy perspective when the university goes in to discuss these collective agreements, with professors, unions, campus safety union to include human rights and also limit this type of language because it is not currently included in their current contracts. Do you have a position on it?
Kathleen: I was very disappointed and disheartened to see what has been occurring on the UOttawa campus and although we are not much better I am glad to support you and students any way I can. We are involved in EDI advocacy and we talk about different ways to include more EDI throughout our campus. I had a discussion with Devin in charge of campus security in regards to the security on campus and policing in general.
Tinu: Alongside the EDI group there was a point that I brought up with accountability with professors in the classroom. This does not go against the human rights code but frankly not everything that is racialized, homophobic, etc. needs to be adjusted to a framework that reflects a safe and inclusive classroom.
Nathaniel: Building off of Tinu’s points, I proposed a motion that is going to the vote of the board in December on mending the SRRP, the Student Rights and Responsibility Policy. I will send a link to my website and it essentially does what you’re saying going through the equity services pathway due to it being a departmental shift which is more difficult to create change because of the slow process. Whereas this motion would essentially accomplish category 1 and 2 putting racial slurs there, gender based discrimination, and all these different type of identity discrimination there instead of ammending the human rights code so I think there are 2 different approaches there although it is just how we can create the most change as possible. Do you think the human rights code is the best route for that or do you think we can have a more evolved discussion about the SRRP?
Tinu: I believe that doing a separate sector will be most beneficial because once we put the human rights code into it it can get a little more messy. But creating a new place that can be added to it would be best and this can be further discussed on how we can elaborate on this point.
